

The Da'luk

Wiya't halilhit! (Let the Eel River flow!): A Potter Valley Project Update

The Potter Valley Project, a water diversion project in the Upper Mainstem Eel River near Ukiah, has caused significant problems for the Eel River and its ecosystem. The Project, which was built over a century ago, includes two dams: Scott and Cape Horn. These dams cut off hundreds of miles of important spawning and nursery habitat in the Eel River headwaters for fish like salmon, steelhead and Pacific lamprey, reducing their populations and impacting the health of the river.

The main purpose of the Potter Valley Project (PVP) was to generate hydroelectric power and divert water from the Eel River to the Russian River for agriculture. Scott Dam forms the Lake Pillsbury reservoir and 12 miles downstream, Cape Horn Dam diverts Eel River water into a tunnel and through a mountain to the Russian River where it is used to make a small amount of electricity. Historically the dams took much of the water from the upper Eel River, especially in the summer when fish need it most, but in recent years, federal regulators have forced the owner of the dams PG&E to better manage flows to support Eel River fish populations.

The construction of the dams has had devastating effects on the Upper Eel River's ecosystem. Dams are unnatural structures that impede fish migration to upstream spawning grounds and disrupt and modify the transport of sediments and wood creating unnatural conditions. Pacific lamprey, for example, lack the ability to jump over barriers and migrate in high flows. Lamprey are poor swimmers compared to salmonids. They use their suction disk mouths to help climb over structures, but any structure that is perched, constricts water, and has sharp 90° angles like a concrete dam or fish ladder can impede their passage. The Wiyot Natural Resources Department has studied numerous migration barriers in the Eel River and noted that Pacific lamprey require assistance traversing barriers which can be eased by providing a rounded surface with continuous water flow.

The dams also create an “ecological trap” which results in salmon and lamprey spawning in less productive areas. This means young salmon and lamprey have greater competition for resources in nursery areas as they grow before their journey to the ocean. The dams also result in increased predation risks for adult salmon and lamprey as they are exposed to predators at the dams and can have their migration delayed, missing important high-flow conditions that allow them to move through the river safely. Young lamprey and salmon migrating to the ocean can be confused by the abnormal flows released from the dams and face difficult growing conditions due to increased water temperatures and changes in sediment size.

But there is hope. In recent years, PG&E has made the decision to surrender their license to operate the project and decommission it. The project is unprofitable, losing $5-10 million per year in operations and maintenance costs. With no party willing to pay for the needed upgrades and continued operation of the project, PG&E is currently developing a plan to decommission the Project.

Decommissioning does not necessarily mean dam removal and water users in the Russian River would prefer for the dams to remain so they can continue to use Eel River water; however, dam removal is clearly what is needed to help restore salmon and lamprey populations. PG&E must be convinced to do the right thing and remove their dams and repair the damage they have caused to the river. A number of feasible alternatives have been identified that could maintain a winter diversion into the Russian River watershed to meet the needs of water users, but water users have yet to develop a plan to pay for the water supply they benefit from.

Many conservation and environmental organizations are advocating for the removal of these dams to restore the Eel River's ecosystem and the species that depend on it. It's clear that the issues related to the Potter Valley Project and dam removal on the Eel River are complex and multifaceted, and will require careful consideration and planning to address.

Announcing the Candidate for Council member at Large 2024-2027

♦ Hazel Garcia

Announcing the Candidate for Treasurer 2024-2027

♦ Michelle Hernandez

Ha'wa'lou, my name is Michelle Hernandez Wenzler. I am currently running for the Treasury position for the Wiyot

Council. I grew up on the Table Bluff Reservation, where I reconnected with our traditions and culture by being part of the revitalization of the Coming of Age and World Renewal Ceremonies. Even though I live in Los Angeles or Tongva Land, I have found different ways to stay connected to our culture by teaching all generations our traditional practices. My education consists of a Bachelor of Arts in both Film and Native American Studies from Cal Poly Humboldt and a Master of Fine Arts Degree in Film and Electronic Media from American University. With the leadership and development skills I have obtained through running my own business and directing, I can implement them to benefit the tribe and the position I seek. I have created and co-founded Sugarbush Hill Productions with my partner, where we develop and showcase diverse stories.

Many of our projects focus on Native themes, and as a Native person, I've always made it my goal to show representation whenever possible and to give voice through our stories. I have been able to accomplish that with my art by telling stories that are rarely heard and can cause an impact on change. Currently, I'm producing an environmental documentary about the Baduwa't River and the reclaiming of the name, and the impact the river has environmentally. I previously held the Treasury position from 2013 to 2014. During my time on the council, I helped to establish a youth program and acquire a building for the program. Creating a space for the youth was vital since they are our future. The skills I learned from my first time on council and the years in between can help strengthen the tribe. If chosen for this position, I want to see us grow through community and economics and focus on continuously revitalizing our language, practice, and culture.

Tsek Houdaqh January Recap

The Tsek Houdaqh Youth Program is back into the full swing of things! This past month we were excited to welcome eight children back to the center and provide them with a safe and engaging learning environment. During our after-school program, we provide children with snack/supper, homework help/tutoring, daily physical-health activities, and fun art/STEM activities. This past month, our kids have been busy practicing their multiplication skills, learning Soulutluk, cooking, and reading daily. They have also been busy playing soccer, capture the flag, and volleyball. Each day the kids have had the opportunity to explore their creativity and imagination as they have created paintings, collages, and other DIY projects. The kids have been most interested in slime making, which opened the door to discussion topics like quantity, texture, and chemical reactions. Their slime making has also provided them with the opportunity to strengthen their collaboration and communication skills, as they helped each other find the perfect combination of glue and "activator".

As we move into the month of February, we hope to be able to continue to promote a culture of kindness, collaboration, and respect throughout our center and community!

DGRLCC Newsletter Article

In January, we had less visitors to the Da Gou Rou Louwi' Cultural Center because we had fewer open hours for the public this past month. However, we did host a school group and the presentation and discussion went well with the young people. If you are interested in having your youth or school group visit the DGRLCC, please reach out to Marnie Atkins to schedule a time.

Also in January, we had our front windows replaced! The new windows will help protect our cultural items from the UV rays the sun produces and provide a more temperate environment and reduce humidity in the Cultural Center. This project has been months in progress, and we are thrilled this project has been completed.

Check out our Facebook page for updated open hours at the Da Gou Rou Louwi' Cultural Center: <https://www.facebook.com/DGRLCC/>. Note that you do not need to have a Facebook account to access the page information. It is open to view by the public.

The Cultural Center will be open for Arts Alive! on Saturday, February 4, 2023, from 6:00 p.m. – 9:00 p.m. We will host Dishgamu Humboldt in February. If you've ever wanted to learn more about the Tribe's Dishgamu Humboldt endeavor, please stop by the Cultural Center and speak with David Cobb.

Also, continue to watch our monthly Newsletter for ongoing updates about programming that will be offered at the Cultural Center.

For more information, contact Marnie Atkins at (707) 798-1949 or matkins@wiyot.us. The Da Gou Rou Louwi' Cultural Center is located at 417 Second Street, Suite 101, Eureka.

SOULATLUK LESSONS AT TSEK HOUDAQH

As part of the Tribe's ANA language curriculum development grant, Lynnika & Nina (with assistance from Marnie) have begun teaching weekly Soulatluk lessons to Wiyot youth at Tsek Houdaah on Fridays at 2:15. We are very excited to offer regular instruction again, now with lessons that build on each other in a more structured way. Our plan under the grant is to develop and improve the Soulatluk content we're introducing at Tsek Houdaah so that it can eventually become part of the permanent curriculum at local schools.

Trojan Y – What Is It and How Can It Help Wiya’t?

As some have likely already heard, the Trojan Y Chromosome Strategy (TYC) has been proposed for years now as a way to possibly eliminate invasive Sacramento Pikeminnow from the Wiya’t (Eel River) – but what is it? According to scientific literature, TYC is “an autocidal genetic biocontrol method proposed to eliminate invasive alien species” – but what does that actually mean? Well, as both a fisheries technician for the WNRD and a master’s student working on TYC, I will do my best here to define the technique and describe our current situation as effectively as possible.

The goal of the Trojan Y Chromosome Strategy is to eliminate an invasive fish species by removing all females from the population (with no females left, no more new fish can be born). This is accomplished by stocking special fish which can only make male babies, using some biological trickery - where normal female fish have two X chromosomes (XX) and males have one X and one Y (XY), these fish have two Y chromosomes (YY). Thus, their offspring must have at least one Y chromosome and therefore can only be male. As these fish mate with wild fish, the number of females in the population will gradually decline to zero over multiple generations.

So how close are we to stocking YY Pikeminnow in the Wiya’t? Not very. There are many unknowns, including how difficult YY fish will be to make, how many will be needed to successfully eliminate all Pikeminnow, and how many years it will take. It might even just not be possible with the amount of resources we have. That’s where I come in – my master’s project is to use statistical modeling to figure out whether TYC is a good idea and, if so, how many YY fish we should make and stock. If everything goes well, we could start stocking before 2030, but I think 10-15 years is a more likely timeframe. We have a long way to go!

Whether a YY fish mates with a female fish (XX) or a male fish (XY), it will always produce male offspring

The Wiyot Natural Resources Department (WNRD) WANTS YOU in 2023!

Ha’wa’lou out there in Wiyot Country and beyond from the WNRD. We hope you and your families safely rode out the earthquakes and storms that brought this year in with a bang! That said, I know all of us are thankful for the life-giving rains and full rivers and hope we are on our way to being pulled out of the historic California drought, and that steady rains continue to bless us throughout the winter and spring seasons. We are excited for the year and the hopes for us to be able to get together again after two years of pandemic lock downs and protections that were made to keep us all healthy and safe. As public Tribal servants, it is our job to both protect natural resources like water, air, wildlife and plants that traditional ecological knowledge (TEK) has taught us are not just resources, but relatives in the more-than-human world deserving care, respect, and stewardship, but also to carry the voice, wishes and environmental concerns of Wiyot citizens forward in the work that we do.

This year we have several exciting projects and opportunities we want to encourage Wiyot citizens to participate in, including the drafting of our next 4-year joint United States Environmental Protection Agency (USEPA) Tribal Environmental Plan (ETEP), to identify environmental priorities of concern for the Wiyot Tribe, assist in defining the goals of the (WNRD), and educate the Tribal and General Council (Tribal Community). Although the majority of Tribal landholdings are situated in rural locations, there are numerous environmental issues that affect the health, safety, and quality of life for Tribal members.

The Wiyot and WNRD also have a stewardship role to play in the protection of the broader ancestral territory from Plhut Gasamuli`m (Little River) to the north, Tsakiyuwit (Bear River Ridge) to the south, the Shou`r(Pacific Coast) out to as far as Berry Summit in the northeast and Chalk Mountain in the southeast. Look to keep up on current issues and opportunities to participate in environmental advocacy and planning within Wiyot ancestral territory by attending the WNRD monthly Community Advisory Committee meetings, which occur the first Tuesday of every month, presently on zoom, but we hope to have in person meetings later this year. Tune into our next meeting, this February 7th at 5:30 p.m. where we will be highlighting and getting input on the ETEP and hearing about current movements to remove the Eel River dams and Wiya't halilhit! (Let the Eel River flow!)

This past month we submitted our Community Engagement Plan for the recent re-acquisition of the Mouralherwaqh cultural property at King Salmon as part of our Ocean Protection Council (OPC) Prop 1 grant and will be announcing future opportunities for Tribal citizens to get out and see the property as well as contribute information and hopeful goals for the properties Eco-Cultural Restoration and Management Plan. This month we also had the kickoff meeting for a Wiyot Tribal Cultural Landscape Assessment contract with the Udall Foundation, identifying important Wiyot places for climate adaptation planning as we prepare for impacts related to sea level rise and offshore wind development on the Wiyot coast. As part of our climate change resilience and planning work we will be hiring a Wiyot Youth Intern this summer to assist with documenting resources of importance and preparing for climate adaptation through activities like removing invasive English ivy (Hedera helix) from our majestic dap (Sitka spruce) trees at Mouralherwaq to make them more resilient to high wind events helping to protect the important canopy habitat for birds like the huluqhiyan (great blue heron) and endangered marbled murrelet. If you know a Wiyot youth between 14-25 years of age looking for a job this coming summer who is interested in environmental work and stewardship of their ancestral lands and waters, send them our way! If you would like to participate and contribute in any way to the following WNRD projects, please reach out! It is an honor to serve the Wiyot Nation!
