Ha'wa'lou

Ha'wa'lou everyone, I'm happy to be back! I previously worked for the Wiyot Tribe in 2008 for about five years helping catalogue and make storage mounts for the collection, creating exhibits, and generally helping wherever needed in the Cultural Department. I went on to manage the Clarke Historical Museum for 12 years, then Redwood Acres Fairgrounds, and lastly spent a couple years working as the Budget and Grant Manager for the Cultural Resource Facility at the university, while having two kids, Wes (2 years old) and Etta (5 months). I'm excited to be part of the excellent team at the Da Gou Rou Louwi' Cultural Center, who have all helped me feel right at home! Rra'dutwas (respectfully), Ben Brown

Join the California Conservation Corps (CCC) Watershed Stewards Program (WSP) Saturday May 4th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Table Bluff Eco-Reserve for a Watershed Awareness Volunteer Event (WAVE) where volunteers will be working to restore native coastal prairie species including planting culturally important plants of the Wiyot Tribe like the oneleaf onion (Allium unifolium) and Angelica and stabilizing drainage channels and seasonal wetlands with slough sedge (Carex obnupta). It should be a fun and rewarding family friendly event and an opportunity to pass on some Wiyot culture to the future generations. We hope to see you there and May the 4th Be With You! ## Humboldt Bay Symposium Update

The 2024 Humboldt Bay Symposium took place on April 12th, 2024 in Jaroujiji (Eureka). The WNRD presented during the Friday Ecology and Restoration Session. That event was sold out with many researchers, practitioners, and government officials in the crowd. The WNRD, with partners from the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), gave a presentation discussing the restoration of Hiksha’ri (Elk River) and the agreement that has facilitated it.

The Good Neighbor Agreement (GNA), which is a formal contract between the BLM and the Wiyot Tribe allows for the Tribe to act as stewards to these forests. Our BLM partners spoke about the agreement and also provided a brief background on the forest itself. Some important notes about the GNA are that some governments are able to keep revenue generated from restoration activities (such as thinning) but Native American tribes are not. This is one aspect of the GNA we hope to see changed in the future.

The presentation included a brief introduction on how important this partnership is by the WNRD. As we have reported before in this newsletter, the BLM Headwaters Forest Reserve is the only contiguous forest under federal management in the Wiyot Tribe’s ancestral lands. This forest is special for other reasons though. The remnant old-growth voupul (coast redwood) stands that have survived over a century of logging are the last of their kind in Wiyot Tribe ancestral lands. They are also the last patches of old-growth forests that runoff into tributaries that feed Wigi (Humboldt Bay).

Hiksha’ri also is the home to Salomon (Valhuk), and Pacific Lamprey (Gou’daw) that use these waters. They run up into the Headwaters Forest Reserve from the lower private landholdings. The WNRD and BLM are continuing to work on enhancing habitat within Hiksha’ri through the loading of large woody debris. The wood provides many benefits to both the stream and the fish while helping restore the riparian forests above the water’s edge. Marisa McGrew (fisheries) of the WNRD showed images of work that has already been completed and how they were drastically impacted by those powerful winter rain events.

As we continue to protect and restore areas adjacent to these ancient forests, we also build capacity to engage in other lands. While we work to protect these trees that reach so far into the past, we look toward a future of opportunity. The forest and the river will be providing a space to train future Indigenous foresters over the summer, and to support a forestry and fisheries technician within the department. This is one way the WNRD is working within systems to create benefits for the Tribe.

Look forward to hearing about more updates from the WNRD.

If you have any questions or would like to talk about what is going on in the Headwaters Forest Reserve, please reach out to Zack (zerickson@wiyat.us) or Marisa (marisa@wiyat.us).

TBR Seasonal wetland functions and Non-point Source Pollution Prevention under CWA 319

Ha'wa'lou out there in the glorious Wiyot spring. If you made it outside at all this past winter, which we hope you did, I'm sure you noticed that it was a wet one! We had countless storms dropping over 41 inches in Jaroujiji (Eureka) since October, but with the drought years I think some of us forgot the annual average precipitation for our area has historically been around 46 inches/year, making this year about average. Table Bluff is scattered with seasonal wetlands, biodiverse areas where the water table reaches the surface only during the rainy season, and sometimes only during wet years. This year we saw almost contiguous ponding at the Table Bluff Reservation (TBR) wetland in the southeast quadrant of the Rez along Bayview Drive. Natural rain accumulation and runoff from the road filled this TBR wetland early on in the fall along with other seasonal wetlands around Table Bluff, providing benefits to macro-invertebrates and in-turn waterfowl and marsh birds like the meluqhiyan (Great Blue Heron) which was seen regularly this winter within the TBR wetland. The Tribe employs wetlands protections and enhancements thru native cultural plant installations that filter out and reduce runoff from TBR streets and vehicles. The photos below note seasonal runoff this winter with the most recent showing dry down and establishment of native rushes like (Juncus effusus), red flowering currant (Ribes sanguineau), and red alder (Alnus rubra), to name a few species planted over the last several years combined with wetlands protections using EPA Clean Water Act (CWA) Section 319 to monitor non-point source runoff and install native plantings to mitigate potential pollutants into the groundwater and in turn work to protect the water quality of Wigi (Humboldt Bay). This work is just one example of how EPA CWA funds support the WNRD to help better protect the environment from pollution. To learn more about CWA 319 and water stewardship activities of the Tribe reach out to the WNRD. Adam Canter, WNRD Director, adam@wiyot.us 707-733-5055.

Wiyot Tribe Fisheries (WTF)

The fish keep WNRD on their toes. This is a general update on all things fisheries with our department.

Starting in the Eel River estuary at Ocean Ranch, we have officially surpassed an entire year of monitoring since restoration was completed in 2022. Monthly monitoring began in February 2023 so we hit our year mark this past February, and we're still going. We caught coho salmon smolts across the property, and they look happy and healthy. Estuaries are extremely important habitats for anadromous fish like coho – this is an important transition zone where young juveniles can go through physiological changes to prepare themselves for the ocean. Other fish we have seen include the federally endangered tidewater goby, Pacific herring, longfin smelt, and finally we have caught young chinook salmon!

Moving upstream to Lhou'lhaqh or the South Fork of the Eel River, WNRD will have written the Lhou'lhaqh Sacramento Pikeminnow Management Plan. After five years of pikeminnow monitoring, suppression and research this plan is essentially the first iteration of information and methods on the ecology and potential control of this fish. One new piece of info worth noting that came from our work is the discovery of sexual dimorphism displayed in Sacramento pikeminnow in the Eel. This means that there is a distinct physical difference between males and females – males tend to be smaller while females tend to be larger. This has greatly supported our efforts in targeting large pikeminnow for removal, and taught us more about this fish species.

Within the Eel more monitoring is about to occur, but this time the focus is on eels or Pacific lamprey. We will be conducting spawning surveys looking for adults and their nests, backpack electrofishing to look for the juveniles, and speaking with tribal eelers on their catch. This work will help us learn more about their abundance and population in the Eel River.

Moving out of the Eel and into Wigi to the South Fork Elk River, we have started some long-term restoration work. This includes the installation of large wood into the stream to enhance salmonid and lamprey habitat and stream complexity. We have over seven miles of stream that will likely have large wood installation involved. The special part of this work includes the forestry side where simultaneously by falling some of these trees for the stream, we're also opening up the forest canopy to allow low-growing shrubs to grow, and decreasing density of the forest.

Dear Families,

With summer quickly approaching, we would like to share information about the many educational services available to you and your child. The education department has several recreational/extracurricular programs available through the Child Care and Development Fund, Johnson O’Malley, Youth Activities Program, and Humboldt Bay Native Youth Community Project.

The Child Care and Development Fund (CCDF) program provides childcare services to working parents/guardians or parents/guardians who are enrolled in a job-training/higher education program. Childcare services include full or half-day childcare for Native American children ages 3 to 12 years old at the Tsek Houdaqh Childcare Center. To become eligible for CCDF services families must complete a childcare application, provide work verification/proof of income, and provide a copy of their child’s birth certificate and current immunizations records.

The Johnson O’Malley (JOM) program provides Wiyot students in grades k through 12th with academic and cultural services during planned tutoring sessions, cultural/language enrichment activities, and achievement recognition activities. Children who are enrolled tribal members of the Wiyot Tribe or are the descendants of a Wiyot tribal member may be eligible for JOM service. JOM services may not be duplicated.

The Youth Activity Program (YAP) is available to children who may not be eligible for CCDF or JOM services, but reside within 5-miles of the Wiyot reservation or whose parents/guardians are employed by the Wiyot Tribe. Children enrolled in the Youth Activity Program are invited to participate in planned activities.

Lastly, Native American students who are enrolled in a partnering school districts may be eligible to participate in planned academic and cultural activities through the Humboldt Bay Native Youth Community Project. To find out if your child’s school is within a partnering district, please contact the Tsek Houdaqh Education Department. We can help connect you with your student’s district Site Lead and district specific activities.

To enroll your child in an educational service, please contact the Tsek Houdaqh Education Department at (707) 733-5055.

We look forward to working with you and your child this summer!

Hou’ (Thank You)
