Please do not wait until the deadline to submit the request, get your request early so there is enough time for you to receive the ballot by mail and return it by Election Day. If you are unsure if you requested a permanent Absentee Ballot you can contact the office at (707) 733-5055 to verify you are on the permanent Absentee Ballot list.

Ha'wa'lou,

My name is Marnie Atkins, and I am running for the position of Tribal Chairperson on our Tribal Council.

I have been serving as Secretary on our Tribal Council since 2021. Previously, I served on the Council as a Member-At-Large. I have worked for the Tribe in multiple capacities throughout my life. I helped set up the Cultural Department and Tribal Historic Preservation Office as a full-time employee, and I developed and worked in our Language Program as a part-time employee while I went back to school at Humboldt State University in the early 2000s.

After graduating from Humboldt State University (now called Cal Poly Humboldt), I attended graduate school at the University of Oregon. It was there that I was able to gain tools and skills to aid my learning and teaching of Native American languages; specifically, our language, Soulatluk. I was also able to gain more knowledge from Indigenous Scholars about the impacts of colonization and genocide from my course work in Cultural Anthropology. After my education was complete, I worked a while in the for-profit world and, eventually, returned home to help set up the Da Gou Rou Louwi' Cultural Center and become the Cultural Department Director when the previous Director moved to a new position.

Even though I have experience in higher education, I know that the most important lessons I have learned in my life were taught to me by our Elders and our Culture Knowledge Bearers. It is because of these incredible people that I have been able to stay strong in systems that are not a welcoming environment to Native peoples. It is because of the lessons of strength, resilience, and tenacity that I have been able to persevere in places not meant for Native peoples. Through listening, observing, and being mentored, I have come to a place in my life where I have enough accrued knowledge to undertake the work our tribe needs to accomplish in the coming years and for our generations to come.

Subjects and tasks that I want to move forward for the Tribe include:

- Workforce development for tribal citizens on and off our reservation lands.
- Education opportunities (whether in a formal academic setting or through job shadowing/mentorship opportunities).
- Economic development opportunities.
- Continue our efforts to revitalize Soulatluk and our traditional cultural practices.
- Develop wellness classes based in traditional practices for stronger emotional, spiritual, mental, and physical well-being.
- Better communication within our tribal community and government and outside our tribal community and government.

These are just some of my ideas. Some of these ideas have been done in the past but have fallen by the wayside – but were well received and supported by families and our community! Others have not been pursued fully or in earnest – let's give them a try again! And other ideas were tried but have not been successful – let's see why that might be and find a new way to approach them, together!

I strongly believe that working together we can find ways to make positive changes for our tribe while continuing the good work our previous tribal leaders and tribal staff members have done over the years.

Whether I am voted to serve as your Tribal Chairperson or not, I will always work hard to move our tribe in a positive and sustainable direction. I appreciate your time and I hope to earn your vote.

Rra'dutwas (I think highly of you/I have big thoughts about you/Respectfully),
Marnie

Table Bluff (New) Reservation Annual Water Quality Report

Public Water System #090605124

2023

This report is a snapshot of your water quality. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to standards set by regulatory agencies. We are committed to providing you with information because informed customers are our best allies.

Do I need to take special precautions?

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and Centers for Disease Control (CDC) guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Water Drinking Hotline (800-426-4791).

Where does my water come from?

Your water comes from 2 ground water sources.

Why are there contaminants in my drinking water?

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity including:

microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, that may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, and wildlife; inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming; pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban stormwater runoff, and residential uses; organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems; and radioactive contaminants, which can be naturally occurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations that limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

Seining at Muralherwaqh

Waders on, we took our first steps into the water and pushed past the sedges and cat tails. We had only walked about 25 feet until we looked around ourselves observing this new perspective within the western-most wetland at Muralherwaqh. Zack and I were in awe as we realized we were surrounded by dense mats of sedge; originally, we thought this wetland was dominated by cat tails. Kasie, our WSP Corpsmember found us amongst the sedges, and we hashed out a plan.

We met back up with the summer internship group of students and got them fitted into waders and provided them with tools. Our plan was to remove some of the cat tail mats to open up the water to sunshine and air. These sedges are important for wetlands, but allowing light to reach the water without any obstacles would potentially enhance the water quality. It would also allow us to drag a seine net through the water more easily. Once the clearing was all said and done we grabbed a bucket and our seine net and got ready to run the net through the cleared area. A seine net typically has a net with a pole on either end of the net, a lead line on the bottom of the net to hold it close to the bottom, and a float line on the top of the net so it floats on the surface. Seining is a method to collect fishes and invertebrates floating in the water column to tell you who exactly is there, which is what we have been wondering regarding these wetlands.

We dragged the net in the cleared space and brought it up to the surface. Initially, we collected a lot of mud. After about twenty minutes of sifting through the mud, we found three adult Northwestern

Salamanders, three frog tadpoles, stonefly larva, and some midge fly larva. Outside of the net we also found a green chorus frog and a three-spined stickleback. I, myself, was particularly excited about the stickleback. These fish can reside in fresh, brackish, or salt water. We know these wetlands were connected to Wig. Finding this stickleback continues to make me wonder who else is swimming around in these mysterious wetlands.

Humboldt Bay Native Youth Community Project

In June, a group of students from the reservation and partnering school districts traveled to Eugene, Oregon to attend the University of Oregon’s Native Youth Field Day! Students were selected based on school attendance, participation in Native American Club/Tsek Houdaqh activities, and have shown interest in sports. During their visit, students toured the university’s campus, heard from admissions staff and current students, and participated in field day activities. Many of our students asked questions about how to apply to the university, costs and financial aid, admittance rates, and showed interest in the extracurricular activities offered to students. Through the Humboldt Bay Native Youth Community Project we hope to increase Native American student graduation rates and promote a culture of college and career readiness throughout our community!

Educating the Educator

Education is a life long journey. In Humboldt County, almost 10% of students in the K-12 system are Native American. This statistic shows the importance of teachers and educators in our area knowing about the history, culture, and traditions of local tribes.

In June, the Wiyot Tribe’s Education Department Director, Elizabeth Hernandez, was invited to join educators from Humboldt, Del Norte, and San Diego County on a evening Madaket ride on Wigi and around Tuluwat. Throughout the evening, Elizabeth shared her knowledge of the tribe’s history, language, and traditions. Meaningful conversation was had among the educators about the lasting impacts of colonization and the 1860 massacre. Through these conversations we hope to create more culturally responsive and trauma-informed learning environments for Native American students.
